Metaphor: Educational Adventure

Guided Tour criteria:

1. Highlights how your metaphor weaves reflections, artifacts and coursework into whole, as you guide visitors through your eP.

- In you preamble, you explain that the guided tour will not reveal all the secrets or your e-portfolio. Rather, it should be considered a treasure map that will guide you to unexpected treasures. In the interest of keeping the tour short (4-5 minutes), I agree that this is the best approach to the guided tour. In addition, this explanation is well suited with your metaphor. Very clever!

In addition, you introduce your metaphor at the beginning of your video tour.

2. Documents the story of your transformation through the MET program, with meta-cognitive reflections at the program level, informed by theory and research.

- While not explicitly covered in the tour, you have directed the viewer to where they can find this information.

3. Provides a way to review the artifacts with attention to learning theory, links that you have made as you constructed the ePortfolio, and to the role and integration of technology in your context.

- While not explicitly covered in the tour, you have directed the viewer to where they can find this information.

4. Includes an exploration and explanation how the ePortfolio is organized, why it is organized that way, and how it demonstrates what and how you have learned.

- You have provided a very detailed explanation for how to navigate your website.

5. Discusses your journey. Highlight some of your considerations in constructing the ePortfolio the way you did.

- While not explicitly covered in the tour, you have directed the viewer to where they can find this information.

Overall feedback:

Chantal, I believe that the video tour should be short yet informative which I feel you have accomplished. A video tour that reiterates everything that is contained within the pages of the eP would be overwhelming and redundant. I think that your video tour touches sufficiently on the above criteria by directing the viewer to each page where the criteria are further developed. Your video tour gave me a better sense of the organization of your site, and (importantly) kept my attention by keeping it under 5 minutes. Great job Chantal, your eP is very comprehensive and thorough. As general feedback about your eP, I am anointing you are the queen of reflection!

Congratulations,
Alix
